Deaf awareness in the classroom

ACSW Project for implementing a training session for teachers/tutors in education.

CSW's interpreting process.

ACSW is creating a training session to encourage good practice for teaching Deaf students in mainstream classes, and how to use a CSW.

The aim is to provide information to a wide variety of teaching professionals: Teachers of all student ages, Tutors in FE/HE establishments, support staff and administrative staff. After attending the training session, delegates should have a better awareness of the role of a CSW, how to modify teaching strategies & resources to include Deaf students, understand the needs of a Deaf student and the role of ACSW.

The package will include a PowerPoint presentation and information handouts for each delegate to take away. This training session has been piloted on a small scale and has proved a great success.

If you are interested in becoming a presenter, let me know in the first instance. We would like to recruit as many presenters as possible so that we can meet the demand when the time comes. We are developing a presenter information pack, which will clearly explain how to lead the session and present the material. It will provide information on what areas need to be covered and help with answering questions etc.

You will be given appropriate resources to present the material. When you are confident to start you will be sent out to educational establishments to present the session, which will last for about 1 hour. How often you will be asked to present is unknown at this time. We will know more when demand starts.

The session will be marketed across the range of education establishments in the UK, so it is important we have enough presenters ready to meet the demand.
